WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—The Roosevelt administration has prepared a body-blow aimed at the Chicago meat-packers. The government is going to crack down on them and crack down hard.

The reason is the highly constructive and unreasonable meat-packing code which they themselves drafted. Members of the Brain Trust consider it most reactionary. It exempts the packers from the anti-trust laws. It exempts them also from the consent decree. It gives the Department of Agriculture no access to company books. It makes not the slightest effort to protect the consumer.

So the Brain Trust has determined to expose the packers.

FISHING DOLLARS

By the few who know about it a lot of significance is seen in the secret fishing trip of Canadian Minister Herridge. He has gone off to the New Brunswick woods to fish with Dean Acheson, virtual Secretary of the Treasury.

The guess is that the two men will do more than fish.

Herridge, brother in law of the Canadian premier, has much to do with moulding Canadian policy even from Washington.

One thing, he has been studying is a tie between the Canadian dollar and the American dollar. Herridge is also tremendously interested in having Canada adopt the NRA.

Probably Acheson will come back with an understanding for a closer link between the currencies of the two countries.

CONSUMERS' CREDIT

Consumers' credit, by which the workman, farmer and any needy person, can borrow money, has been approved by President Roosevelt.

The man who put it across with him is Edward A. Filene, Boston merchant prince. He pointed out to F. D. R. the necessity of aiding the credit of the workman as well as that of the bank and big business.

20 30 Clubs To Hold Big Meeting Here

Dr. James Neil, of Oakland, last night told members of the Richmond 20-30 club at their inner meeting of "History That Isn't Taught." He discussed early American finance and growth of our political parties.

Dr. Ed Rutledge was chairman of the evening and Archie Higgins presided.

A joint meeting with Vallejo, Napa, St. Helena, and other clubs at Richmond on October 11, will be held, it was stated.

Next Sunday, it was announced, a baseball game with the local Lions will be played at First street field. Both teams, as usual are confident of victory.

A dance to be held September 29, at the Peralta Golf club was also announced. Plans for this affair are progressing rapidly.

Ed Massa, of the Hayward 20-30 club was a guest of the evening. He entertained with a number of piano selections.

The next meeting of the club will be held next Thursday evening.

New Policy Of The Malt House

Announcement of a new policy at The Malt House, 1168 Macdonald Avenue was made yesterday by Geo. Garrard and Ralph Lee, proprietors of the place.

Conversion of the shop into a first rate beer tavern has been announced. Under the new plan, first class meals will be served at the establishment. Richmond residents may find an opportunity to enjoy the best in good foods and good beer, Garrard said.

The Malt House specializes in the sale of 29 different brands of eastern, western and imported beer.

The interior of the establishment has been completely renovated and it presents a spick and span appearance. It will be conducted on the best character plan and patronage of ladies will be solicited, Garrard said.

The Malt House will also have free delivery to any part of the city.

Winter Loop Organized By Local Teams

Organization of a Maxwell winter league was perfected last evening at a meeting of team managers here. Seven clubs will participate in the league, which will open on October 1 here. A split season will be played, with eight games in the first half and eight in the second.

Winners of the first half and winners of the second half will meet in a championship game.

Signing of all players will be open until the Wednesday preceding the game, it was stated.

A schedule of games will be drawn up later. All games will be played at Seawright field, with the exception of the Standard Feed and Fuel nine which will use the El Cerrito diamond.

A trophy for the winning team, and gold baseballs for all players on the winning nine will be presented by an Oakland hardware store.

Major Ivan W. Hill has been named president of the league and Earl McCann will act as secretary.

Teams represented at last night's meeting were: Macabees, W. G. Mackey; Standard Feed and Fuel, M. Amaral; Richmond V. P. W., Robert Dolan; I. O. O. F., James Brown; Palace Markets, J. A. Legault.

On Tuesday night the lodge will attend a session of the county council of Eagles at Pinole.

A. Pelly presided last night.

YEGGS SLAY CHICAGO COP IN ROBBERY

CHICAGO, (Friday) Sept. 22.—UP. Six bandits held up two federal reserve bank messengers here shortly after midnight, seized four bags of money and escaped after killing a policeman.

The bandits, employing an ingenious smoke screen, raided the messenger's car as it proceeded from the postoffice to the federal reserve bank.

Five men were in a car that pulled up alongside the messenger's car. As they leaped out with machine guns, huge clouds of smoke poured out of their car which was following the first. Their escape covered by the smoke screen.

Five blocks away they crashed into an automobile containing three boys and three girls. A policeman on the corner stepped over to question the occupants.

Three men opened fire with machine guns and the other fell, with a dozen shots in his body. Dozens of other persons were in danger.

W. W. Knowles drove by a moment later.

The bandits commandeered his car, threw the money bags into it and fled.

The slain policeman was Alfred Cunningham, 35. The amount of loot could not be immediately determined.

ANTONE BENA SHOT BY OWN RIFLE; TO BE BROUGHT HERE

The week-long search for Antone Bena, missing Richmond man, ended at one o'clock yesterday afternoon when a party of searchers came upon his dead body. Bena lay on the trail, a bullet in his head. His automatic rifle lay near his side.

DEATH WAS ACCIDENTAL

A maze of tracks, and an impression in the earth where Bena had fallen told a mute story of his accidental death while lost. The body was found in Merced county, six miles southeast of Wawona, on the south fork of the Merced river. Bena was only eight miles away from his own camp when death struck him.

RANGERS FIND BODY

The body was found by Assistant Chief Ranger Sam Eastman of Yosemite Park, who was accompanied by Rangers Madison, Jacobs, and Warner and Deputy Game Warden Brown who had been hunting for the missing man since Sunday.

2 GAMBLERS PLEAD GUILTY

First word of the grim discovery was received here yesterday when Postmaster John A. Miller of Richmond, who was at the scene of the search, telephone Assistant Postmaster Dennis Shaw of El Monte.

Miller, his wife, Mrs. Bena and family, J. R. Beck, E. Soldavini and Angelo Bertoli, of El Cerrito and Walter K. Dunlap, of Richmond were at their camp when the news of the discovery was given them.

Dividends On Vet Insurance Are Reduced

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—To build up reserves and offset low-level earnings, the Veterans Administration has reduced dividends on its insurance policies 55 percent, affecting 613,000 holders of $2,768,000,000 in such obligations.

For payments going out in the current calendar year, a total appropriation of $3,650,000 has been allotted, as compared with $7,270,000 paid out last year, when the estimated average was $16.67 a policy.

"The dividends paid on government life insurance were less than the previous year, because it was deemed necessary to place an increased amount to the credit of the reserve provided for losses, and also but to a much lesser extent, due to the earnings of the insurance fund being at a somewhat lower rate," the Administration explained in a statement.

It will determine after the close of business on December 31 what the next dividend rate will be.

Richmond Boy
May Star For
St. Mary's 11

A Richmond boy has been discovered as a new star for the St. Mary's football team, it was learned yesterday.

Nick Bracco, former local high school star and a sophomore at the college, has been taken off of the fourth squad by Coach Slip Madigan and put on the first squad.

Nick began to ride hard over his teammates in scrimmages as a half-back and was away to the races.

"It's the first time he has followed his interference," said Coach Madigan, who was visibly impressed. "We couldn't tell where he'd run to before, but if he keeps following his interference he may do nicely."

Madigan liked Bracco's showing at guard position last night and believes the sophomore linebacker will be important to the Gael front wall this fall.

U. C. READY TO MEET BRONCOS
ON SATURDAY

BERKELEY, Sept. 21—Today was the day the Golden Bears of the University of California were supposed to scrimmage for the first time.

But instead of that, they crossed up all observers and scrimmaged on Monday, upsetting all precedent and prediction, just as Coach "Bill" Ingram plans for them to do on the gridiron.

Getting ready for Saturday's game with Santa Clara is evidently a very serious business with Ingram, this year. In his first season, 1931, the Bear football coach admitted freely that he didn't have time to get ready for the Bronco. Fortunately for the Bears, the Santa Clara team went into the game with their strength sapped by injuries, and California started Ingram on his western career with a 6 to 2 win.

Last year, still freely admitting that he didn't have time to train his sights on Santa Clara and St. Mary's at the same time, Ingram sent his team onto the field well-prepared but the Broncos were better prepared, and they won.

But now the Bears seem to be definitely pointing for their rivals from the valley institution, and the only possible result—since Santa Clara is reported in a "potholing" frame of mind—is one of the greatest of the many great California-Santa Clara games in dozen years of football rivalry.

Ingram is driving his team, not with desperation or panic, but in a cold, calm, thorough way that gets things done—that moves scrimmages up two whole days in the five days allowed to get ready for the game, that installs 53 plays in two workouts and sees many of them "click" the second, third and fourth days of practice.

Presenting 1933 Golden Bears

COACH "Navy Bill" Ingram of the University of California at Berkeley isn't saying much about his team chances this year, but keen observers have pointed out that they're just the kind of an outfit to step out and beat the best elevens on the coast. A few of the stars pictured above, left to right: Joe Verducci, quarterback; Howard Christie, center, and Charles Bertoli, fullback, who is pointed for places this season. Lower, from left: John Ranson, who captains the squad and plays left tackle; Arleigh Williams, left half; Howard Morris, left guard and Will Boone, right tackle.

Speaking Of Sports

LOS ANGELES—UP—A new star of fistiana is rising out of the West to threaten the dominance of Barney Ross and Tony Canzoneri in the ranks of the lightweight.

Young Peter Jackson, spindly-legged Negro, capitalized on his chance to win national recognition a week or so ago by pounding out a decisive victory over Lew Massey, the Philadelphia Italian. So decisive was his margin of victory that his backers immediately began dreaming of the title fight.

Deserves Consideration

Distant as such an encounter may be, Jackson deserves consideration as a ranking contender for the crown the great Penny Leonard held so long. For two years he fought nondescript opponents as a state champion. He suffered not a single setback. He offered a match last January, sidestepped the issue, before that Al Singer declined. It was not Massey, signed for a Los Angeles match with Jackson drew an opponent to whom a victory would give some semblance of national recognition.

Massey, who holds the title of state champion in Pennsylvania, was considered an even-money bet to wallop the up-and-coming Californian. He boasted a string of victories which established him as one of the East's leading lightweight and the outstanding contender for a match with Ross or Canzoneri. Yet against Jackson his star dimmed into total eclipse.

OILERS AND SAN RAFAEL
PLAY TODAY

The football game at San Rafael this afternoon between the Varsity of Richmond and San Rafael should be an interesting affair in that Richmond will be out on the Bulldog field digging their plants in the turf determined to prevent their season's record from being a complete bust.

The way the Oilers have been manhandled and rusted about this week in their workouts have led them to believe that unless they turn around and do an about face and put a few wins under the belts few Richmond fans will be on hand to witness their big game of the year against Alameda. This will be the Oilers second game of the season at home and is to be played next Friday.

Of course, there are many loyal fans to the Navy Blue and Red eleven, but how thrilling it can be to the athletes to rush out on their home field at the approach of game time and witness a friendly crowd rise from their seats in one great roaring chorus of cheers.

Naturally, the demonstration is more spirited when this same friendly crowd is pulling for a winning team to add another triumph.

Coach Frank Ribbell of the Oilers is determined to have a winner this year and before the season is over Ribbell will at least have accomplished one purpose—the foundation of a 1934 varsity that should be the talk of the town.

However, a hustling Richmond eleven this afternoon at San Rafael will defeat the Bulldogs and to defeat San Rafael the Oilers must be at their best.

But to save the Varsity for the tough Alameda game Ribbell is forced to start the game with his Ralph A. Wood will be employed in the office and will take care of registering unemployed.

It was stated that the bureau was opened here because of the fact Richmond is the largest city in the county.

Imbach said that a branch office probably will be opened in Martinez shortly to register workers in the upper end of the county.

The national recovery act provides that unemployed persons are being done under federal appropriations shall be given employment on the jobs. Such projects as highways, harbor dredging, reclamation, etc., are included.

Inasmuch as the paving of San Pablo avenue through El Cerrito, Richmond harbor dredging and possibly some other projects soon will be under way in Contra Costa county, it is desired to register the eligible workers before the work begins, so the men may be placed on jobs. Registration, however, does not guarantee employment, Imbach said.

First preference will be given to war veterans with dependents. Next will come civilians with dependents, and then veterans and civilians without dependents.

The office in the basement of the Richmond city hall will be open from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. daily, except Saturday, it was announced.

Imbach will be assisted by an advisory board that includes Supervisor James N. Long, Charles S. Renwick, Miss Viola Cox, City Manager James A. McVittie and G. J. Allyn.

NEW SPORT

General Hugh Johnson has given Washington a new indoor sport—trying to dig up the sources of his endless classical quotations.

The day before the coal code was agreed upon, he uncorked one that no one has as yet tracked down. Someone asked if the southern coal operators, then fighting the code, would be brought into line. Said Johnson in reply:

"You will find the marks of their feet
Where the broken rivers
Flow."

INFLATION MOB

Behind the R. F. C. proposal to inject one billion dollars worth of credit into business through the banks, is an attempt to spike the inflation agitation.

E. D. R. has told his close advisers that he is not averse to a modified form of inflation—devaluation of the gold dollar—when the time is ripe. But he is decidedly opposed to promiscuous printing of greenbacks. Also he does not like to be rushed.

But that is exactly what Congressional leaders are trying to do. For them, inflation spells Utopia. Many of them are not particular what kind of inflation is adopted just so it is inflation. They also contend that the economic situation has become wobbly. The recovery program, they argue, must be inflated or collapse.

The result of all this is a nationwide barrage of Congressional statements. The goal is a shot in the arm.

So the R. F. C. credit proposal was trotted out to quiet the mob. Probably it won't. Most experts agree it is unworkable anyway. The soft coal operators of the North and the soft coal operators of the South, once bosom buddies, are now sworn enemies. And this is the reason why:

NORTH AND SOUTH

During the long drawn-out negotiations over a coal code, operators of both North and South put their operating costs on the table. And the Northern operators discovered to their horror and amazement that the Southern operators were producing at about half their cost.

They were paying sweatshop wages to negroes and cheap white labor, and with this advantage they were undercutting coal producers as far north as Ohio and Michigan.

So the Northern operators became the biggest boosters for the coal code General Johnson had.

Every time the Southern would balk, the Northerners would rush around to Johnson and whisper: "Don't give in to those hand-bellied babies. They're gyping labor. Make them come clean."

This was an important factor in the final code agreement.

"MUST-GET-THEIRS"

Three of the Administration's best known junior executives have organized an exclusive luncheon club. Its members are: Marvin McIntyre, White House secretary; Turner Hattie, assistant to Madame Perkins, and "Chilly" Robert, assistant Secretary of the Treasury. Almost every day they may be seen dining heartily in one of Washington's best known hotels. Their comradeship has attracted so much notice that they have been dubbed the "Three Musketeers."

"That's what they call themselves," was the answer, "but we know them as the 'Three Must-Get-Theirs'."

HOMELESS IN CONTRA COSTA NUMBER 2370

Mrs. Ruth W. McCord, of Martinez, director of the county social service bureau yesterday received results of the one-day census of transients, which was taken in California on September 1, showing that there are more than 100,000 persons wandering homeless in the state.

At the request of R. C. Branton, state emergency relief administrator, this county and forty-four others in the state cooperated in taking a census on September 1.

In Contra Costa county the total of transients was 2370, and the official state total announced today is 109,174. This figure lacks only the census of ten of the less populous counties.

There were 1,064 transients in the county who had resided in California less than 12 months, the Contra Costa figure showed, while the figure for those residing in the state more than 12 months was announced as 1,306.

Administrator Branton also stated that the ratio in the state showed there was 59.1 per cent men transients, 23.3 per cent women and girls, and 1.6 per cent boys.

A one-day census was taken so that the count would not be duplicated as transients moved around the state.

In appealing to the state supreme court, defense attorney, Edwin R. was expected to charge errors by both the jury and Judge Syer.

E. R. Graham, a member of the jury, today admitted defense claim that he was a special deputy sheriff appointed by Sheriff William E. Graham drew no pay as a deputy.

He insisted, however, that he had only a passing acquaintance with Sheriff Emile.

Bride Sorry She Squealed On Husband

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 21 (UP)—Mildred Lawson, red-haired bride of James Lawson, alleged Kansas habit, wept today as he started back to a probable life imprisonment on information she supplied.

"I'm sorry I squealed, Jim," she said. "I guess the only thing to do now is to get a divorce."

Lawson, whom police claimed admitted middle west robberies in which loot totaled $180,000, did not answer his wife.

Sheriff Mel Gibson of Coffeyville, Kan., said Lawson would be accused of a $2,600 holdup there. A three-time loser, conviction will mean life imprisonment, Gibson said.

The Lawsons came to California last January. Jim, determined to "go straight," secured work as a leather cutter.

His wife caused his arrest, saying he made threats against her life.

In a dramatic denouncement of her in police headquarters, the husband ordered her to remove her jewels and wedding ring.

"They're all stolen," he shouted at her.

Treating and Curing the Victims of Chronic Sore Throat

THERE are many reasons why the habit of having a sore throat is dangerous and why definite measures should be taken to correct and cure it.

This can be done if not neglected too long. The body gets into habits and shows evidence of weakness just as the character does, and needs to have its administrative principles revamped. It is never well to cast suspicion too quickly and the whole-sale removal of tonsils in chronic throat trouble is as ill-advised as the many hasty operations for suspected appendicitis. The tendency to develop a raw and irritable throat upon slight exposure or on frequent occasions may be treated first by systemic methods such as alkalizing remedies or local applications to the diseased area. This is both temporary and temporizing and in the meantime, the general conditions should be carefully observed.

THE local hygiene is always wise for it serves, at least, to keep the membranes of the throat clean and the infection somewhat under control. There are frequently conditions that seem like anemia. The patient finds himself generally depleted and is easily exhausted. He may begin to have an occasional throat flutter since the heart action always responds to an acute infection. Many of the infections and contagious diseases find their starting point in the throat. Among these are measles, diphtheria and scarlet fever. Quinsy and tonsillitis are, of course, seated there and have many sequelae. In consequence, a delicate and easily inflamed throat is a standing invitation to such infection.

IN ANY case of any form of rheumatic fever, the tonsils should come under the most rigid observation. Sometimes their location will chance to be sufficiently deep in the walls of the throat that they are not conspicuous in any way and their guilt will escape suspicion.

A HEALTHY young girl in my own family awakened one morning with pain in the jaws and neck. A day later, the elbows were affected and a specialist was called. In less than a week, she was in the hospital and by the time an operation could be arranged, her knees and ankles were disabled. The tonsils, though very innocent but were found to be deeply imbedded and full of pus. This girl had never had tonsillitis but the operation proved the source of the acute articular rheumatism. I should remove the tonsils just because nothing else can be found to do but if they are proven defective, their surgical treatment is the safest way out. When the current throat soreness is confined to the tonsils, relief can be obtained by applications of iodine solution or nitrate of silver. A better way is to cauterize the surface with an electric current.

THE very abundant blood supply of the tonsils has given rise to alarming stories concerning the loss of blood during the tonsillectomy. The operation is so perfected now both in technique and equipment for taking care of discharges, that when the removal of the tonsils is found necessary one can be assured of its safety unless there are other complications. It should always be done at a period when the patient is in the best possible physical condition.

MODES AND MANNERS

QUESTION: "Should a man's title be used on a wedding announcement or Mr.?"

ANSWER: The title, by all means. The name used in an announcement and invitations is the same as it is on his visiting card. If he is known as "Dr. So-and-so" it would be misleading to refer to him as "Mr. So-and-so" in a wedding announcement.

QUESTION: "When salted nuts are passed around, how many is the guest supposed to help himself to, and where does he put them?"

ANSWER: He should help himself to several at a time and put them on the cloth some where in front of him before he begins to eat them.

TRAVEL MAKES BEAUTY RITUAL MORE DIFFICULT

By JACQUELINE HUNT

NO MATTER how difficult our problems are, we can adapt ourselves or circumstances to meet them. How else could we live? Without this ability, there could be no happiness, no love for our fellow creatures, no beauty. No matter how hard we work or how many enemies there are to our loveliness, we can adapt our beauty treatments to combat them successfully.

It is when the conditions are constantly shifting that the adjustment becomes difficult. A set of beauty treatments used successfully under the hot sun and heat of the dusty city, or on the kindly shore of the ocean, are entirely inadequate when you are traveling. There is little time for adjusting your treatments as you go, so you must select the methods and the cosmetics that seem to meet most conditions most satisfactorily before you begin your journey.

The coast to coast trip that your beauty columnist has just completed has been a valuable lesson and I hope that the suggestions that I have for you will be of value to those of you who expect to travel by car a lot during your vacation. Driving is fun—the ideal way to travel when weather conditions are just right, but devastating to your beauty when you must go from leafy driveway and cool breezes into a blazing prairie sun and drying hot winds.

Constant vigilance is necessary if you want to arrive at your journey's end looking as fresh and charming as when you left home. Let me repeat the advice given to those who vacation abroad—"travel light." Two of the little ensembles of woven cotton and wool or cotton mesh and a tight-fitting little beret to keep your hair out of your eyes and prevent its blowing and breaking in the wind will suffice for the journey. For the stops, pack simple things that do not crush easily and so will not need careful pressing when you want to wear them. You will find the shops full of these new cotton non-crushables and lace-trimmed and light-colored. They take little space and launder easily.

My most faithful friend on my trip was my little bottle of sun-tan oil. I applied it quite liberally after splashing my face and arms with cold water when I first got up, and allowed a few minutes for my skin to absorb it. I then wiped away any that remained, applied a soft cream, and a little powder. The faintest dusting of power. I found that not only did the oil prevent sunburn and windburn, but it made a very satisfactory powder foundation that I shall continue to use this summer.

No more peeping in my mirror until I stopped for lunch, when I applied a bit more of the oil, wiped away the surface dust and brightened my cheeks, if necessary, with a little powder rouge the same color as my paste rouge. I found that it was simpler to use when I carried only my handbag and did my freshening up in poorly equipped rest rooms.

Evening was a problem. I traveled each day until it was too dark to drive in comfort, then stopped at the nearest small town, where the hotel accommodations were not always of the best. Washing was pretty sketchy, so I had to depend on a good cleansing cream and a skin tonic to do most of the work of keeping my skin in order. This cleansing, massaging my hands with a healing lotion and giving my hair a brief brushing constituted the whole of my evening routine. And this treatment was quite complete and satisfactory for a week or ten days at a time.

On my longer stops, however, I used lots of soap and water, to prevent any signs of excess oiliness, mild tonics and soothing hand lotions, except on the days when I expected to be out of doors a lot.

Snappy New Panama

One of the snappiest of the new Panama hats does a neat trick with its gros grain ribbon band. Instead of a tailored bow, one end of the hatband is stitched and pressed into a smart loop which slips over a matching ribbon-covered button at the other end. The hat is one of those exceedingly clever things with two folds running from front to back on either side of the crown. You have the same style in ballbunt if you prefer, and the colors cover a wide range, including yellow, light blue, navy, brown, beige, pink and, of course, white and black.

Tasty Dishes for Today

SALADS SERVE ALL PURPOSES

By JUDITH WILSON

SALAD in Europe usually means a bowl of crisp, fresh greens, tossed together with a subtly flavored dressing. Usually the salad is mixed at the table by the man of the house and served with the meat course—and delicious it is. It makes my mouth water to think of it, but we Americans do not make salads that serve only one purpose.

Instead we make piquant little salads of unusual ingredients and serve them as appetizers, or we combine left-over meats, fish, vegetables, macaroni or greens with crisp celery and greens and perhaps a discreet bit of onion or green pepper and serve them as main dishes. Or, if the rest of the menu is fairly heavy, we concoct a marvel of colorful, tasty fruits, pass a sweet dressing and have our salad and dessert all in one.

A Tasty Salad

Of course we have real salads too, and the French custom of preparing them at the table is gaining in popularity. Select a bowl you can't find one that is too large and arrange in it your assortment of greens along with thinly sliced radishes, thin tomato wedges, tiny crescents of celery and a little finely chopped onion or green pepper. Chill both your bowl of salad and your dressing. Bring the salad to the table, pour the dressing over it and then toss together until every leaf is drenched. Before they have time to absorb the dressing, while they are still crisp and colorful, serve onto the individual plates or give each person a chance to select his favorite morsels. Of course the salad is not so good to look at once it has been doused with dressing, but how good it is!

Salad Dressing

One of the secrets of successful salad making is in the dressing. Your favorite salad dressing can be discovered only by experimenting. The most popular salad dressings are variations of French dressing and my favorite one goes something like this: I put about one-fourth teaspoon of dry mustard, one-fourth teaspoon paprika and a little black pepper in a small mixing bowl. This I mix to a paste with one-half to three-fourths of a teaspoon of Worcestershire sauce. Then I add one-half cup of chilled olive oil and one-fourth cup very tart vinegar (wine or cider) and beat to blend thoroughly. This is sufficient dressing for a large bowl of greens. It is usually necessary to add more salt. Make a fresh batch of salad dressing each time. It tastes better.

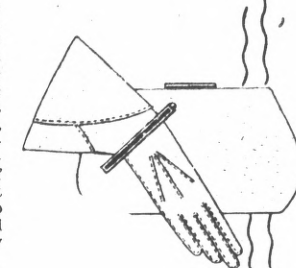

Salmon Aspic

To make the salmon aspic, soak two tablespoons of gelatin in one-fourth cup cold water for five minutes. In one and one-fourth cups boiling water. Cool and add one-half cup lemon juice and one-fourth teaspoon salt. Pour a layer in a mold and make a design with slices of stuffed olives and capers. Chill until firm, then cover with one can of salmon that has been flaked. Pour on the rest of the gelatin and when it starts to congeal add one cup of cooked

New York—Current fashions require, may demand, individual interpretations, and this is the very thing that makes for variety and interest at the moment. While diaphanous, trilly things are "in" so too are straighter dresses and sturdier fabrics. Tailors are busy, but not at the expense of dressmakers. Sport clothes are of great importance, but they are kept well without bounds. The well-dressed woman goes away on a vacation with a wardrobe evenly balanced with sports and spectator and dress types. Also with colors that are gay and those that are nun-like.

Fats help in destroying the uniform look happily absent. There seem to be not only no two alike, but no two worn at the same angle, or made on the same scale. The flat pancake crown, sometimes with brims at either side, in a balanced effect, represents one type. In opposition to it, although friendly opposition, is the hat the crown of which insists that it has a right to be seen, and to even climb skyward. That it gets crushed and knocked to one side only seems to add to its voice.

Excessive crown height is not a virtue, even the little toques of chic style which are worn long in soft straws or fabrics and flexibly draped to suggest the outlines of the head. More numerous are hats with brims in white or natural colored straws, Panamas leading, trimmed with grosgrain often in two or three colors. Folds and flat pleats give movement to a costume. The hat is made to sit to curve irregularly up at one side, down at the other, than to be regularly straight, often the brim is turned up at back.

Copyright, 1933, by Fairchild. All sorts of variations and modifications, involving combinations of fabric with leather, are seen in the adaptations of the sport shoe for fall. Buttons or open lace closings, may appear. This model sketched happens to be in black kid with a white kid top. The handbag and gloves, both of pinkish, are a novelty. An emerald band is posed at the upper left hand which permits gloves to be slipped through and

Home-Making

By ALICE STERN

The same glass jar may be used again and again for canning, but it is wise to be provided with new jar rings each time. This extra small investment may mean the difference between fruit that keeps and fruit that doesn't keep.

To remove oil stains from wall paper, use a piece of blotting paper, holding it over the stain and applying a hot iron. If blotting paper is not available, heavy brown wrapping paper will do.

There is an electric drier on the market for drying small articles, such as gloves, stockings, handkerchiefs, or a baby's clothes. It does the job so rapidly that it promises to become an indispensable household article, especially in families where there are growing girls and the problem of fresh gloves and silk stockings is ever present.

Get one of those one-gallon glass water chillers with a convenient faucet for your ice box and you'll always have chilled water on hand. It is oblong in shape, built like a jar with a top that comes off conveniently for refilling purpose.

So that the vegetables in the vegetable bin may be surrounded by circulating air, remove leafy tops and other excess parts before storing them there. Pack loosely. Sprinkling will revive them if wilted.

You and Your Child

PLAY IS INDEX TO CHILD MIND

By JANE HERBERT GOWARD

IF YOU want to know what a child is thinking, listen to him at play. Make-believe is a comingling of impressions and wishfulness. That this should be natural, his ideas are borrowed, and from the vehicle for expressing his desires. We say it is pure fantasy because it does not make sense to us. But for a child, fantasy is a "logical" process. It is good advice to observe and study a child's actions with an open mind. The habit will teach us patience, and better understanding of the nature and needs of the child. Opportunities to correct wrong impressions are bound to come up, thus enabling us to prevent certain maladjustments.

Child With Wrong Idea Take the following incident as an example. While sitting in the park recently, a six-year-old playing nearby approached me and said, "Lady, have you any tickets?" "What are you?" "A ticket collector," he replied matter-of-factly. I had no tickets, but I had a pad, so I tore off several leaves and handed them to him. At the moment it did not occur to me that I was encouraging begging. His mother smiled and nodded, and I turned to my book.

Half an hour later the boy stood before me again, this time with outstretched hand and a pathetic look on his face. Obviously he had changed his role and was a ticket collector no longer. "Give me a penny, please. I'm starving." I shook my head and told him to run along. Evidently accustomed to being turned down in this role, he turned slowly, the same sad look on his face, and limped away. It was a perfect performance. This time his mother laughed loudly, frankly amused. And this time I was annoyed.

Constructive Help It is not the child's fault that he plays beggar. The fact that the role appeals to his imagination may even be a point to his credit; some beggar must have moved him to pity to have made so important an impression. The child is not to blame, but his mother rather for failing to recognize and correct an erroneous impression.

Begging is not an occupation worth aspiring to. A wise mother would not encourage the habit. She would tell her child that when he plays beggar he is really poking fun at a helpless person.

At the first opportunity she would make it possible for him to be of service to a beggar. If he must play make-believe involving vagrants, why not suggest the role of benefactor, so that he may experience worthy motives while pretending.

Herr Hitler Classifies His Women . . . A Comparison in Child Welfare

THE present German Chancellor has many unique ideas which time alone will prove worthy of otherwise. Some of these his lieutenants are responsible for, but the amazing platform concerning women in the Nazi program is Hitler's own classic contribution. It decrees that women in Germany must be divided into four blood classes as a protection of racial purity.

If Hitler has his way—and from all reports he seems to be—each woman would be required to wear her class emblem on her arm. The first class would comprise those whose purity of blood is beyond reproach. They would be the German-born daughters of 100-per cent German parents. Fascists would be forbidden to marry any one not in this class.

Women of the second class are those whose purity of German blood is under suspicion. For example, those who had a Slav ancestor, perhaps generations ago, would fall within this group. In the Hitler plan, this group would be kept under quarantine for a time, and then they could be married. The quarantine is to make sure this "tainted" blood has not cropped up again.

The third class would comprise girls of mixed parentage, such as a German father and a Slav mother. While this type could marry "low" type males—that is, men of a similar racial class—the marriage must be sterilized before the ceremony is performed.

Jewish girls would form the fourth and lowest class. They would be forbidden to marry, even with men of their own race. Hitler's purpose being to avoid any increase of Jewish population in Germany. It is reported that Hitler is particularly pleased with this part of the Nazi scheme.

It should be noted that Hitler's plans call for no such blood classes for men. For such a plan would mean a son, like the Chancellor himself, of an Austrian father and a Bohemian mother to the unfortunate third class.

An old German adage states that German women were created for "Kirche, Kinder und Kuche." For Church, Children and Kitchen. Such German housewives as we have met would tolerate any interference in the conduct of their homes. That leads us to believe that when the German women snap out of their slumber and tire of Nazi parades and uniforms, they will doubtlessly tell Herr Hitler in no uncertain terms, to stick to politics and not meddle with womenfolk.

DR. WILHELM FRICK, newly appointed Minister of the Interior in the "Third Reich," is one of the new Nazi leaders who are advancing and proposing laws to bring about more and better German children.

The good doctor, like his chief, Herr Hitler, is enthusiastic about purest Germanism, particularly in the rising generation. He not only demands 100 per cent Germans but perfect health. To gain this end he would rid Germany of the weak, or at least attempt to prevent their multiplication.

Dr. Frick cannot understand why the state should be compelled to spend millions of dollars for the care of the insane, the crippled and the diseased. Thus he reverts to a system which was in vogue among ancient savage races, who through necessity were forced to allow only the strong among them to live.

Compare this scheme with a system now being tried in the great City of New York by the Crime Prevention Bureau of the police department. Students of criminology know that those who stray from the straight and narrow path usually come from the congested areas of a great city. Harlem in midtown New York has its ghetto, Negro section and "Little Italy." Recently the police of the Crime Prevention Bureau staged a block party in "Little Italy" because youngsters in the neighborhood had a reputation for growing up to dislike policemen, even before they had a chance to know what policemen were really like.

Almost a thousand boys and girls participated in races, skating contests and boxing bouts, and when the excitement was over, there was no doubt in one's mind that all present were satisfied that the "cops" were "good guys."

There was no discrimination with regard to the weak or the strong. Those who were strong participated in the various contests, while the sick and crippled yelled their approval from the sidewalks and tenement windows. Were they "pure" Americans? Not by a long shot. Were they 100 per cent Americans? You bet, and because of the enlightenment given them, they will without doubt in most cases grow up to be a credit to the land of their adoption.

'AGED LOTHARIO' WRITES ABOUT FROCK FRILLS

By MARIAN MAYS MARTIN

IF IT'S discussion you are after, one can always be stirred up by introducing the subject of whether or not women's frocks for men or for each other. Everyone from the grammar school era up seems to have positive convictions on the matter. The really amusing part of it all is no matter which side of the argument you take, that women never seem very clear about what men do like by way of women's clothes. It's altogether impossible to see the men as a little mixed throng in this complicated and ever-changing subject.

MEN seem to feel that their solemn duty to band themselves against fashion, individually and collectively, they are always expounding on the folly of following the mode. Then what they really have in the back of their heads is the expenseiveness of the practice.

WERE it possible for women to outfit themselves in excellent fashions, beautifully made and beyond the fashion "date," no doubt the budgeters would rejoice, but, after all, it would be a dull and stale world, in a country which frowns on men changing their wives, it must be something of a solace to those who tire quickly, to find that the selfsame wife has something of the talent of a chameleon—although not entirely a God-given quality.

ISN'T it rather natural to suppose that men whose wives look best in masculine clothes, so called, should prefer to have them wear them? It is certainly logical to suppose that men expect their wives to look their best. It also follows that this must be a type that appeals to them most, since, after all, they selected it out of all others.

THERE are other men who resent anything competitive in women's attire, and who want the smoothest in frills and ruffles things entirely foreign and opposite to what, it seems to me, an unkind fate has doomed them to wear. My morning's mail happens to have brought me a letter from a man who seems to be of this type, and perhaps something of a pacifist as well, for he also appears to disapprove of the military motif, which, one must admit, is present in a good many of the especially of the so-called sports variety, that are now being worn. But here's the letter:

"Dear Mrs. Martin: I should say, that the fashions for men were warlike rather than masculine. Perhaps the women are organizing a Battalion of Death. Anyway, those G. A. R. fatigue hats and high, military shoes, and the way they look like they were arming for another Gettysburg. Where is the war?

"Marlene Dietrich got out of control when she reached Paris and went back to looking like a man. I understand that her press agent couldn't do a thing with her. The very simplicity of the Parisians disconcerted Marlene, too. The French seem to be so frantically naive about things.

"But I, for one, predict that masculine clothes will never be very popular with women. Men like women because they are women, and when they look like something else their stock falls. It is notoriously hard to fall in love with a woman who looks like a man. It simply isn't done.

"You may have noticed that men who wear womanish clothes are greeted with catcalls and the Bronx cheer. Why should a woman who gets out of character be applauded? The Marlene caper was pure press agency, but its far-flung influence on styles for women was appalling. Will they ever learn?

"When I die, my estate, consisting of one million dollars in Confederate money and a small assortment of Peruvian bonds, will be willed to a woman who talks with a lisp and wears feminine clothes. I am not averse to dummies. Yours for depression on both cheeks.

"YE AGED LOTHARIO."

THE "baby stare" type always calls for fluffy, ruffled, and frilly. With white, navy is the favorite combination; reds and some brown are also combined with white. Very pale pastels are also worn, as a relief to the navy costumes. It is popular, and other much worn combinations are light brown with pale beige or with orange; and pale beige with black or darker brown, or relieved by blouse or scarf of plaid.

White Still Important Whits continues very important, with gray and beige strong in the increase. With white, navy is the favorite combination; reds and some brown are also combined with white. Very pale pastels are also worn, as a relief to the navy costumes. It is popular, and other much worn combinations are light brown with pale beige or with orange; and pale beige with black or darker brown, or relieved by blouse or scarf of plaid.

Trio Taken In San Jose

when the three men entered the shop.

Recognized From Description
The officers immediately recognized them from descriptions broadcast by Contra Costa County authorities after the holdup.

Drawing their guns, Murray and Dundon forced the trio to surrender and they were taken to San Jose.

Officials Notified
Officials at Martinez were immediately notified and this morning Leo Blevins, of Oakland, who sold a second hand car to three bandits who used the machine in the Pinole holdup, and A. B. Westfall, service station attendant who saw the bandits, will be taken to San Jose to identify the suspects.

Details of Robbery
The holdup took place shortly before bank opening time. As George A. Dutra, bank employee, entered the door a holdup man stepped up alongside of him and thrust a gun and a knife against his side.

Inside the bank was Miss Dolores Whitaker, who has already figured in two holdups as a bank employee. The robber gagged her with adhesive tape and bound her with wire. He then forced Dutra to open the bank vault, after which he tied and gagged Dutra and laid him beside the girl on the floor.

The man stuffed his pockets with currency, ran from the bank and jumped into an automobile which a confederate had kept watch.

The robbery was discovered when L. E. Hunt, cashier of the bank, entered the place some time later and found Dutra and the girl helpless on the floor.

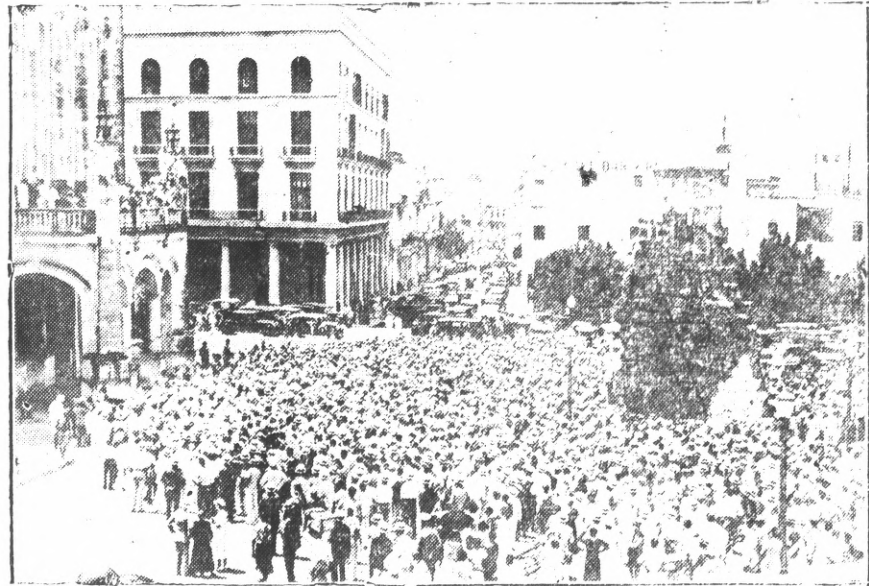

The robber cut the telephone wires while he was in the bank, delaying the police alarm for some minutes.

Piaola residents saw the two men who staged the holdup in the vicinity of the bank at least half an hour before it was robbed.

Bena on the hunting trip that resulted in the local man's death. Bena became separated from his companions on Saturday.

Refused Guide's Service

Late Saturday afternoon he appeared at Wawona Camp and asked directions to return to his own camp. He refused services of a guide. That was the last seen of him.

How It Happened

According to the information received here, Bena had become hopelessly lost and wandered through the woods, bewildered, lost and tired, rangers believed he stumbled and fell.

When he did, the automatic rifle he was carrying, was probably discharged and the bullet entered his head.

Rangers reported that he had evidently been dead since Saturday night or early Sunday morning.

From the tracks left in the soft soil by Bena, it is evident that he wandered around in a circle for many hours, before the accident robbed him of his life.

Funeral on Saturday
The body will be brought here this morning to the Ryan Funeral Home by motor hearse. At eight o'clock this evening Rosary will be said at the chapel.

The funeral will be held from St. John's church at El Cerrito at 10 o'clock Saturday morning with the cortege leaving the Ryan chapel at 9:30. Interment will be in St. Joseph's cemetery.

Antone Bena was 51 years of age and a native of Italy. His home is at 4602 Huber street, Richmond. Deceased had lived here 18 years and had been employed by the Pullman company as a truckman for 11 years. He came to California 27 years ago from Italy.

Relatives of Deceased
Deceased leaves his widow, Ida, two daughters, Angelina and Theresa; two sisters, Mrs. Mary Norcini and Caroline Cosola, of Italy; two brothers, John and Angelo of Italy; and two cousins, Mr. and Mrs. A. Goya, of El Cerrito.

He was a member of St. John's church of El Cerrito and of the El Cerrito lodge of OWLS.

Many friends throughout this area are mourning his untimely death.

DONEY IS ILL

John Doney, printing instructor at the Richmond Union high school is reported to be seriously ill at an Oakland hospital.

"CARRY ON" IS MESSAGE OF F. HOLLENDER

Frank J. Hollender of Pittsburg, county chairman of the NRA, in an interview with a representative of the RECORD-HERALD last evening, regarding the work that was being accomplished in Contra Costa County, made the following statement:

"I consider the work for the NRA in this county as being the entire United States has been divided into a number of districts. Contra Costa is in the region composed of Northern California, Nevada and Utah, in charge of George Creed.

"I am given to understand that this region is rated with the best organization and most advanced, due to the wide-spread efficient work and the co-operative spirit of all its citizens. Contra Costa County has all counties in the district.

"Nearly all cities and towns have organized 100 percent men up of employers and also consumers.

"Some of the chairmen of local committees may be inclined to believe that the job is now finished. In this they are wrong, as the work is just starting. True, the first phase of the job, the organizing, is over, but the second phase and the harder job is now before us. That is, holding the line and seeing to it that promises are lived up to.

"Every chairman should have his committee active and interested, particularly his consumer and producer committees. They should have public meetings once a week to that end. Programs and speakers are arranged for and while doing so keep in mind that the NRA is for every one regardless of creed, color or affiliation or standing in the social scale.

"Every individual should consider himself duty bound to see that all these who take advantage of the other fellow's patriotism are exposed. I am speaking of 'chiselers' those that display the Blue Eagle and then use every loophole possible to avoid the provisions made mandatory by signing of the President's Reemployment Agreement. And you may believe as when I say that there are plenty of them right in this county. There is no doubt, however, that if every one of us keeps a sharp lookout they will soon disappear from our midst.

"I am glad to say that the county is taking this movement seriously and people seem to realize that it is a fact that it is and that its success depends on EVERY ONE OF US.

"Then there is also the profiteer, the fellow who boasts the NRA for all it is worth and then blithely goes on the outside and sometimes even adds on a little as his reward for being patriotic. I tell you we have no room for that fellow and the sooner we are rid of him the better off we will all be.

"This is a movement to give the workers in all walks of life a better deal and fair play, and although the employer is not asked to bear it all it is certainly demanded that he stand for his share.

"The worker, however, must also do his part. He must not hoard his money. He should go out and spend a reasonable amount for necessary and useful things as only that way can the merchants and the employers contribute to their share. That is what is meant by 'friendly co-operation.'

"As a matter of information I might say that the first of the enforcement machinery has been set up. All complaints as to violations should be sent to the chairman of the local committee. He will try to have those of minor importance adjusted. If this fails the matter will then be taken further along until it ends up with the United States District Attorney.

"All complaints must be in writing and signed by the complainant. Those of a very serious nature must be acknowledged before a notary. But a complaint must be signed or it will not be given any consideration."
